First, he advises them to divest themselves of all preconceived theoretical notions, which might induce them to neglect essential circumstances for others, the importance of which may be mere matter of opinion. They ought, therefore, to mark down the situation of the solar spots on the day before and the day after the eclipse, in order to see whether they really coincide with the obscuration. Secondly, the observer should hurband his eyes—that is, avoid looking at the sun or receiving its direct rays, untill the very moment of the observation—clse he may be unable to see all the expected phenomena with sufficient nicety. Thirdly, in order to see all the irregular refractions caused by the air within the tube of the telescope, when rarified by long exposure to the sun, the instruments ought to remain covered with a white cloth, having previously with a white cloth, having previously been pointed to the proper spot in the heavens untill the moment when the observation is to begin. This precaution, M. Faye contends, is of the greatest importance, and its being heglected is the cause of frequent error. So great in deed, is the effect of this refraction that the disc of Saturn has sometimes been seen in the form of a square, with its angles slightly rounded off.—Galignari's Messenger.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE Thirty-Seventh Volume

Imdiama State Journal

THE JOURNAL IS NOW ENTERING ITS
Thirty-seventh volume. It was established in 1822, and is the oldest paper in Indiana. It is equal in age to the City of Indianapolis, and is nearly as old as our State Government. It was established when Indiana was little else than a wilderness, and when Indianapolis scarcely existed except in name. It has lived and grown upon its own merits—soldom receiving official natronaga or any merits--soldom receiving official patronage or gov-ernmental favors. Its name is as a "household word" throughout the length and breadth of the word" throughout the length and breadth of the State, and its position upon all public matters—political or otherwise—is so well known that anything said in reference to its course upon any of the questions now before the people would be superfluous.

While the Journal will continue to advocate the great principles of freedom, and give its support to the Republican Party, as the party of the people—acting with the party when right, and repudiating it when wrong—it will be for the coming year more of a family paper than it has ever yet been, and be made more acceptable to the general reader than a purely political paper could be. made messe acceptable to the general reader than a purely political paper could be.

The Session of Congress under a new Administration is always fraught with more or less importance to the welfare of the country, and the present Session will be looked upon with feelings of peculiar interest. The position of the Administration upon Kansas affairs is a matter of much public concern. The Utah question, and the progress of the anticipated war in that quarter, will be a subject of great public interest as long as it remains unsettled.—
Events are transpiring in our own country and throughout the world to make a newspaper indispensable to every individual.

Bounteens crops have blessed the husbandman

Bounteons crops have blessed the husbandman throughout the land; peace, plenty, and prosperity smile upon all, and we appear before the public, asking for its support, feeling that we shall receive it liberally. The past course of the Journal will be the best index of what the future will be, and promising to improve upon former efforts in producing an acceptable family and political newspaper, we submit our chims to a generous and intelligent people.
